Hi, I'm PABLO!! Currently, I have a 5-star yelp review from my foster mom. Read why:

I came to IBR after my previous family dumped me at a city run shelter. I was in absolutely horrible physical shape. My eyes and ears were infected. I was literally skin and bones. I had chunks of fur falling out from an untreated staph infection.

But fast forward to a few short days later, and I am now in a foster home with amazing people who are taking the best care of me. I am on antibiotics, eye drops, ear drops, and steroids. My foster mom says I am a beauty now and she cannot wait to see me in a few short weeks. She thinks I am handsome AF!

So far in my foster home, I am learning to live with lots of other dogs. They are great! We chew toys, play in a wading pool, and run around the yard. I am said to be a wonderful fur brother. I have met two human toddlers and they are ok, but I wasn't very interested in them because they didn't scratch my butt. We were nice to each other though and I could live with one or two, if they were nice to me. Mommy says I am the most submissive kiddo in the house and she wishes her dogs were more like me. GOLD STAR!!

Currently, my foster mom is making me learn to potty outside and sleep in a crate. I don't particularly care for this, but I am learning and get all the treats for being the bestest boy. She told me the vet says my eyes and teeth indicate I am around 5 years old, and that explains why I am a busy body. My foster mommy says my paws never stop and I am nosy trying to understand all the things that are happening in my foster home. I guess my foster mom needs a nap. She seems grumpy.

I am told I am getting my coin purse emptied on July 31st, and then I will be ready for adoption. I don't know what that means but my foster mom said it means I won't be able to make any wild dingo puppies. Puppies sound terrible.

Anyway, if you think I might be a match for you, have your people call my people and we can do a social distancing coffee date. I prefer pup cups with extra 'pup' please.

Xoxo,
Pablo
